

ANDRONIKE

Andronike is the pseudonym for this husband-wife dream pop duo. Named after a woman they met in Greece, their music was born by the sea. Every note carries the rhythm of the tides, every lyric shaped by salt air and shifting shorelines.

INTERVIEW WITH ANDRONIKE

RAMBLE: Either in your own life, or in your music practice what does authentic mean to you?

ANDRONIKE: Being a conscious person. When you're aware of who you are and what's going on around you then you're able to create from that point of clarity. We are definitely inspired by The Beach Boys and other classics but we definitely have our own creative output.

RAMBLE: Can you describe what your creative process is like and/or how you respectively create the lyrical or instrumental portions of your work?

ANDRONIKE: It started when I asked Jimi to work on my album with me. Then we fell in love—went to Greece for a month and wrote 4/5 songs a day. It happens so naturally with us and it's been that way ever since. He usually plays guitar, I play synth and sing a melody over what he creates. We've written most of our songs internationally and Hawaii and explore and play music. I feel he's able to capture the FEELING of a place and I am able to capture the words of that setting.
